Taylor swift past concerts

Taylor Swift's Eras Tour is a historic concert tour that has broken numerous records, becoming one of the highest-grossing tours in music history. The tour is unique because it features each of Taylor's previous musical/aesthetic "eras" as separate sections on her setlist, allowing fans to relive the feeling of each album for a moment. However, this isn't the first time Taylor has been on tour or embarked on a stadium tour. Taylor Swift has had several tours throughout her career. Her first album was a country pop record with singles like "Teardrops on My Guitar," "Our Song," and "Tim McGraw." The Fearless Tour kicked off in April 2009 and ran through July 2010, playing 105 shows across North America and limited stops in Asia, Europe, and Australia. Kellie Pickler joined Taylor as an opening act, with artists like John Mayer, Katy Perry, and Faith Hill appearing at certain performances as surprise guests. The Speak Now World Tour began in February 2011 and featured a total of 111 performances, including seven in Asia and 12 in Europe. It was also her first stadium tour and featured more extensive set pieces, choreography, and costuming than the Fearless tour. NeedToBreathe, Hunter Hayes, and Hot Chelle Rae opened for Taylor. Two years later, Taylor embarked on the Red Tour, which kicked off in March 2013 and ran through June 2014. The tour featured surprise songs that changed night-to-night and certain dates included a surprise guest singing one of their songs as a duet. Highlights included Jennifer Lopez, Carly Simon, and Fall Out Boy's Patrick Stump. The 1989 World Tour began in May 2015 and ended December of the same year for a total of 85 shows. It featured the return of the Surprise Songs mechanic and hosted Vance Joy, Shawn Mendes, Rae Morris, and Haim as opening acts. Taylor Swift has embarked on six concert tours throughout her career, headlining numerous events such as festivals, awards shows, benefit concerts, and sporting events, as well as television and radio performances. Initially, the Reputation Stadium Tour was Swift's first all-stadium tour, featuring surprise songs and guests at each show. The tour was notable for its short duration of 53 shows in May through November of 2018. A concert film called Taylor Swift: Reputation Stadium Tour was released on Netflix but has since been removed. In April 2020, Lover Fest was scheduled to take place from April to August of that year, however due to the COVID-19 pandemic it was canceled. Instead, a one-off concert in Paris was recorded and released as City of Lover in May 2020. The Eras Tour, which kicked off in March 2023, features Swift's previous albums, including those she toured during the COVID-19 pandemic. A concert film called Taylor Swift: The Eras Tour has been released in theaters and is available for streaming. Taylor Swift has had numerous successful tours throughout her career. Her Red Tour was the highest-grossing country tour after its completion with $150 million grossed from 86 shows in 12 countries. The album that transformed Swift's status from a country musician to a pop star, 1989, supported by the 1989 World Tour, encompassed 85 dates in 11 countries and was the highest-grossing tour of 2015 with $250 million. Swift promoted Reputation with the Reputation Stadium Tour, which grossed $202.3 million and set a record for the highest-grossing North American tour of all time. Lover supported by numerous television and award-show performances. The Eras Tour surpassed $1 billion in revenue, grossing $2 billion and attracting 10 million attendees, making it the first concert tour in history to do so.
